COMMENTS:

I fail to understand why we should even be considering storing and the transportation of thousands of gallons of highly toxic and flammable liquid adjacent to a wildlife reserve and public spaces.

Have we as a community gone mad? There are risks we do have to take because existing facilities develop with time and changes in our environment or lifestyle demands, but to allow the building of a highly dangerous facility where none currently exists is madness. Why are we even considering risking the inevitable accident which we will all be so very sorry about with the hindsight brigade all aghast that it was ever considered?

The current narrow road to and from the site is hardly ideal with several blind bends, and of course the opportunity in the event of an unfortunate accident, allowing the spillage of fuel directly into the wildlife park or the choice of two water courses straight into the Thames which is of course the source of drinking water for a large area!

Please let common sense prevail and say no before it is too late and we spoil what is an extremely valuable public and wildlife space. Thank you.
