COMMENTS:

I strongly object to the extension of the construction/demolition hours being extended to 23.00 hrs as the site is situated right next to a residential area. We are already experiencing long hours of noise pollution from the site, which I've just had to accept as one of the issues with working from home. However, for the disruption to continue past 6pm would be unacceptable and inconsiderate because: i. It would be disruptive for the small children who have an early bedtime routine.

ii. It would be very disruptive for school aged children who have homework to complete in the evenings, as well as, those who have exams to revise for.

iii. Not good for our mental wellbeing, we need some rest from the noise pollution we are currently experiencing through the day, especially after a busy/stressful day.

They are requesting the extension to power float the concrete floors at the site. How much noise would that cause? Not just from floating the floor, but the additional traffic attending the site and the labour force on site? What's to stop them carrying out other jobs past 6pm which is either noisy or creates vibration? How would that all be monitored and who would take responsibility for the noise pollution?
