COMMENTS:

Having been a member of the Charvil Fishing Society for a number of years, in my opinion it would be ludicrous to think that a fuel company within such close proximity to a wildlife park could possibly be allowed to operate without there being some kind of spillage at some point during its operation, which in turn would have a catastrophic impact on the environment. Along with the increased daily lorry traffic, turning a peaceful rural location into noisy industrial estate.

Surly the fuel company is able to find a better suitable location to run it's operations.
