COMMENTS:

I strongly object to the proposed storage of fuel on this site. Sitting adjacent to a nature reserve, its lakes and the river Loddon gives the potential for an environmental disaster. I have lived locally for thirty years and each year the flooding from the river has increased in severity. There will be inevitable spillages of fuel on the site and it would be only a matter of time before these leaks would be washed into the water course. This would be devastating to the wild life and have a permanent detrimental legacy. In addition to these environmental concerns, are those of air pollution and noise pollution from the site and its traffic. Charvil is a small village whose infrastructure was not designed for the increase in volume of heavy vehicles associated with a business of this nature.
