

PLANNING REF : 260582
PROPERTY ADDRESS : Honeysuckle Park
: Commonfield Lane, Barkham, Berks
: ?DON'T KNO
SUBMITTED BY : Mr Charlie Eyres
DATE SUBMITTED : 03/04/2026

COMMENTS:

This house is in the barkham special character zone or whatever its called and is victorian (or earlier), so I dont think slapping black cladding on the extension is right. Its not a farm building. Exposed brickwork would be more in keeping with whats there already.

The intended porch look wrong, it sticks out too far for no apparent reason. As the front of the house faces the road and is seen by everyone, it should either be left as it is now or the new dimensions reduced.

I suppose the heritage officer will be consulted on it all.

In it's favor, the extension at the back wouldnt alter the street scene much and is better than demolition and replacing with a new house, which shouldnt happen in the oldest part of barkham, architecturally speaking. Its best to keep the old stuff standing.