COMMENTS:

After years of hard work and saving, my family chose to move to this area because of its strong sense of community, access to woodland and parkland, and the quality of life it offered for our young family.

I am concerned that the continued pace of housing development is placing increasing pressure on local infrastructure, which is already struggling to meet current demand. Roads are becoming increasingly congested, making daily travel more difficult and less safe. Access to essential services, particularly GP appointments and healthcare provision, is also becoming more challenging by the day for residents.

While I understand the need for new housing, development should be balanced with appropriate investment in infrastructure and public services. Without sufficient improvements to roads, healthcare, schools, and other local amenities, further large-scale housing growth risks undermining the very qualities that make this area an attractive place to live.

I urge the council to carefully consider whether existing infrastructure can truly support additional development.

Kind regards,
Terence
