COMMENTS:

I strongly object to this for the following reasons.

The site is totally unsuitable being just metres from Charvil Country Park, lakes and wildlife habitats. With the increasing incidence of flooding in this area, diesel/kerosene contamination could devastate the park, lakes, fish stocks and protected species.

The Old Bath Road is used by many pedestrians, including school children, and cyclists and is a bending, narrow road. It is unsuitable for fuel tankers which would have to stop the traffic in both directions to exit the site as they would encroach on both lanes.

Charvil is a peaceful village. The noise, fumes and pollution caused by this fuel depot would harm the character of the village and enjoyment of the Country Park.

If this is given the go ahead, it is an accident waiting to happen!
