COMMENTS:

In addition to the environmental survey not having found traces of great crested newts in the ponds, we do have them in our gardens, migrating in from the deep wet ditch that runs just behind the gardens. How will this species be protected in the building process?

We do have a big number of bats and tawny owls as well as a number of other bird species living and foraging in our garden, how are they supposed to cope with the noise and disruption? Not to mention toads, frogs, insects like dragon flies etc
