COMMENTS:

I support this application for electric gates and a means to control the level of traffic along Loddon Drive. I am increasingly having to move out of the way of cars that have missed the garages that are located just off the A4 end of the road (which were originally animal sheds, that have now turned into a small industrial estate) that are often travelling far too fast. There are also a large number of cyclists that are regularly using the road, that also travelling too fast and are often rude and unpleasant if you challenge them. I have been on duty for many of our gate closure days and been disappointed by people's rudeness. I actually think if the 'barrier' is put in place it may be that once people have got out of the habit of using the route, it may not be necessary for it to remain shut. The new housing development is a concern and it would seem timely to take action prior to them being built. I think it will be fairly easy to sort out a system where genuine visitors, carers, builders and deliveries will all be able to freely pass through these gates.
