COMMENTS:

This area has very specific areas containing protected wild flowers including namely British Native Bluebells.

A walk along Barrets Lane in the spring will encounter a massive display of this protected species within an ancient woodland area.

I could not find any reference to maintaining this English treasure and I feel that any encroachment will destroy the microclimate needed for them to survive. There needs to be a protection plan in place which I feel is being overlooked. If this area is surrounded by any development then the microclimate will be affected therefore some great distance needs to be maintained. JW
