COMMENTS:

I believe it will be a disaster to allow the oil depot to be built right next to the river that flows into the already polluted Thames at Wargrave. We all know that that river and the other one next to it floods often when we have heavy rain (it is a floodplain plain after all)

The idea of it letting oil into the river and then into the flooded fields totally polluting the Charvil park is abhorrent in the extreme. Lots of people walk through the Charvil park, whether dog walkers or people cutting through, sometimes in their wellies.

It is bad enough when the lorries are parked waiting to get into the distribution warehouse, blocking half the road, often holding up the traffic and the buses too. Yesterday cars, vans and 2 buses were being held up when we passed there heading to Twyford. Imagine when the lorries of the oil depot are there too.
