COMMENTS:

I am strongly against this proposal. The location is so wrong for a fuel depot, adjacent to a beautiful nature reserve and with Charvil meadows across the road. When this depot was allowed to operate on a temporary basis a few months ago, the smell of fuel fumes when walking on the footpath in the nature reserve, behind the depot was very unpleasant. The risk of contamination is very high. The other major problem is the tanker trucks, which are too large for the area. Last time they operated I witnessed tankers trying to get through the cross roads at Twyford (despite them not being allowed to go that way) and it will be very problematic when they enter/leave the site, as we already have problems when the large lorries from the tyre warehouse next to the site try to turn into the narrow entrance, near the dangerous s-bend on the Old Bath Road. The road is too narrow and windy for large trucks! There are many, many reasons why this application should be rejected.
