COMMENTS:

Farley hill is a rural village with no paths , street lamps and very narrow roads . The area has seen increased traffic from the garrison development , with motorists driving through bunces shaw and church road . These roads are not designed for= this much traffic

The a327 is already extremely busy with the area around the tally ho a total disaster area. The new bypass observer way is also far to busy , trying to get out of swallowfield road to Henry street is a total nightmare, as cars on the bypass travel at speed and a very high volume of different motor vehicles .

The infrastructure around Farley hill cannot stand a housing development on this side of the a327, more houses means more cars and people fighting to get on the a327 but will end up driving through Farley hill to swallowfield and beyond

There is a serious lack of public transport, schools, medical centres and as mentioned paths and street lamps. The area around cow city and corner cottage are already seeing an increase in traffic trying the best the a327 system . This area is 100% not designed for this

The residents always knew the garrison side of the a327 would be developed, but not the others side . To build that many houses on the Farley hill side will spell disaster for the local residents and will cause a trend in more builds. It's not sustainable
